THE BRIDGE FAMILY CENTER

Letter from the Executive Director

"You better start swimming or sink like a stone, 'cause the times they are a-changing." Bob Dylan must have written this lyric with non-profit organizations in mind.

The Bridge has been swimming for the past 40 plus years because we must adapt to the changing times if we are to stay afloat. Much of our flexibility is driven by the needs of the communities we serve. As their needs change, so do our programs. We pay attention and then act to provide quality services to those who need us the most.

In this year's annual report, you will read about some new and innovative programs that the Bridge has launched this year. We are excited about these new opportunities and so thankful to have the support of our generous donors, board of directors, volunteers and staff. Thank you all so much for keeping us swimming.

Very truly,

Margaret A. Hann

The Bridge's Family Resource Center Offers a Parent Leadership Program

Promoting the Best Interests of Children

The Family Resource Center (FRC), a program of the Bridge Family Center, was recently awarded a grant from the Connecticut Commission on Children to offer the Parent Leadership Training Institute (PLTI). The 20-week program combines advocacy, leadership, and citizenship skills into a curriculum to promote the best interests of children. It also works with local and statewide programs and initiatives to help parents take an active role in system reforms.

PLTI has been offered in towns throughout Connecticut since 1993 and continues to show great success in training parents as leaders. It is being offered for the first time in West Hartford. The FRC recruited 25 parents who live or work in West Hartford and kicked off the program with a retreat on a Saturday in January. Weekly sessions, held every Thursday evening in the Conard High School cafeteria, will continue through June. There is no charge for the program, and dinner and childcare are provided.

According to Deborah Zipkin, the director of the FRC, the Bridge decided to pursue funding for PLTI for two reasons. First, the FRC has offered UCONN's People Empowering People (PEP) program since 1996. This 10-week program teaches parents how to advocate for their children and helps them to develop leadership skills. "More than 100 West Hartford residents have graduated from the PEP program," said Deborah, "and they asked the FRC for more—more opportunities to use their new skills, more opportunities to connect with a group of other committed parents, and more opportunities to help make good things happen for children. PLTI will offer all of that to participants.

"The second reason," said Deborah, "is that though we can agree that West Hartford is a wonderful place to raise a family, we also know that it can be even better. Our parents and grandparents can help make that happen. Each PLTI participant selects a community service project to plan and carry out during the 20-week program—everything from an Internet safety program to book swaps for children—that will improve the quality of life for children and families who live here. PLTI offers the power of change, provides knowledge about the political system, and gives a voice to people who care most about West Hartford's children."

The Bridge's PLTI has a coordinator and three facilitators. Coordinator Tammy Exum said, "As a former facilitator, coordinator and graduate of PLTI, I am impressed by the diversity, enthusiasm, and caliber of our West Hartford participants. We are seven weeks into the program and the participants have demonstrated a high level of engagement. The support that we have received from Conard High School, community stakeholders and local businesses has been outstanding. The initiative of the Bridge and the Family Resource Center (FRC) will benefit our parent leaders and the West Hartford community."

(The FRC promotes family literacy and the academic competence of children through its nationally recognized school readiness, family involvement, and parent education programs. This past year the FRC served 1,019 West Hartford children and families.)

The Bridge Opens New Counseling Center – Bridge East

In October, the Bridge opened a counseling center in downtown Rockville. For many years, Bridge executive director Margaret Hann, who lives east of the river, perceived gaps in services there and wished that the Bridge could some day help fill that gap.

The time finally seemed ripe, and last summer Margaret and Pat Doherty, director of youth and family services at the Bridge, met with Al Slobodien, Vernon's director of youth services. They wanted his perspective on service gaps in the area. He referred them to Patricia Buell, director of pupil personnel services for Vernon Public Schools.

"Patti was welcoming and opened many doors for Bridge staff to talk to school counselors, principals and other people in Vernon who work with young people," said Margaret. The Bridge was assured of a need for counseling there.

Bridge staff searched for space and found a good spot across from the hospital in downtown Rockville. In October, Bridge East opened its doors.

"It takes a while for things to get going—a lot of patience and nurturing," said Margaret. "We're kind of a toddler right now. We hit a few bumps in the road, but the pace is picking up."

Diana Virgie, community therapist at the Bridge, awaits the arrival of a client at the Bridge East counseling center.

Services at Bridge East include therapy and medication evaluations for children, adolescents and their families. Concerns addressed include parenting, divorce, grief and loss, school problems, ADHD, trauma, anxiety, depression, abuse, family issues, teen pregnancy, and anger management. The office currently accepts HUSKY and Aetna insurance.

"Many of our Rockville clients struggle with transportation issues along with their emotional issues," said Pat, director of the program. "Given this, it sometimes takes an extra call or two to engage them. But once they're in the door, they've been consistent, which is good."

"The Vernon Public Schools are pleased that the Bridge wants to support students and families in this area," said Patricia Buell. "Families are grateful that this service is offered in Rockville. Bridge staff has been very supportive of our students and families and is willing to collaborate with school staff when appropriate. They have a strong commitment to working with children with challenging issues and are committed to the child and the family. Their dedication is commendable. Several very positive, unsolicited reports have been shared with me indicating that families are very pleased with the services at Bridge East."

"We do what we are good at," said Margaret. "We are good at providing counseling and residential services." The Bridge already has residential services east of the river. Bridge East is another way for the Bridge to provide for needs in the community.

The Bridge Family Center's Annual Children's Charity Ball Continued on an Upward Spiral

The Hartford Golf Club was a "haven from the snow storm" for the more than 370 guests who attended the Bridge Family Center's Children's Charity Ball on Saturday, January 21, 2012. The theme for the 13th annual gala was fitting: "Ports of Call: The Bridge - A Safe Harbor." The golf club was decorated in blue, white, and gold; elegant white orchids in blue and white porcelain ware decorated the tables; and flags of different countries hung over the corresponding ports of call raffle creations.

The entire event with ticket sales, silent and live auctions, a raffle, and a pick-a-flower/win-a-prize booth netted more than $215,000 for Bridge services for children, youth, and families in West Hartford, the Greater Hartford area, and beyond. The Bridge Family Center is grateful to a committed and creative group of women who planned the gala; to hundreds of businesses and individuals who sponsored the event or donated items to the silent and live auctions; and to many individuals who made monetary donations to support the ball.

Thank you, thank you!

Scot Haney, emcee of the Ball for the 11th year in a row, entertains guests by riding a bicycle being auctioned in the Live Auction through the crowd and into the Hartford Golf Club kitchen.

The bidding was lively in the Changing Lives Challenge. After viewing a video about the Bridge, guests bid in increments from $5,000 to $100, raising $57,500 for Bridge services.

Tammy Exum, coordinator of the Bridge's Parent Leadership Training Institute, and Earl Exum of Pratt & Whitney, the Presenting Sponsor of the Ball, enjoy dancing to the Shaded Soul Band.

Donor Profile: George C. Hastings

Giving of Himself to Help Young People Thrive

Since its beginning in 1969, the Bridge has been blessed with the dedicated leadership of caring individuals committed to its mission of helping children and families to overcome life's challenges and build fulfilling lives. George Hastings is a "founding father" who has given of himself for more than 40 years to help realize our vision of serving "Every family, every child, every time."

George recalls Bridge founder Dick Jackson's enthusiasm in speaking to a group at Saint James's Church in 1970 about the new youth counseling and drop-in center he and others had recently started. Teens had been dropping out of school, taking drugs, and hanging out on the West Hartford Green. "Dick was very engaging and persuasive; I joined the Board and became the president." Ever since, George has been deeply involved with the Bridge. He has been president and vice president several times, chaired the long-range planning and governance committees, and served on many others. He also mentored middle-school boys for two years in the "Bridge Across Ages" intergenerational program.

Since leaving the Board in 2003, George has continued his active support in numerous ways, from providing advice to hosting "View of the Bridge" informational programs to soliciting contributions. For his many years of dedicated service, the Bridge named Hastings House, our Short-Term Assessment & Respite (STAR) home in Wolcott, in his honor in 2008. Executive Director Margaret Hann said, "George is courageous, caring, and insightful. He shares his wise counsel without hesitation. He gives his time, opens his heart, and shares his humor with all of us."

The Bridge in the Community

George has always been interested in how the Bridge works with the community on behalf of young people. "Our earliest supporters were the churches, and their meaningful involvement has made a real difference over the years. We've also had very civic-minded Board members, among them early leaders Rosalie Lee, Norma Schatz, Barbara Washburn, Nora Anthony, Emily Rankin, and Ruth Freymann," who decided we should have a youth shelter and moved the Bridge to offer more structured counseling and services. After what George described as "two frustrating experiences" trying to get zoning approval for a shelter, strong support from Saint James's clergy and parishioners was instrumental in winning approval for the Farmington Avenue site, where the Bridge Youth Shelter opened in 1978. It has since won statewide recognition and served as a model for the STAR homes opening in recent years.

As George put it, "The opening of the Bridge Youth Shelter transformed the Bridge. It gave us a partnership with the Department of Children and Families and made us not just a West Hartford agency, but one serving the entire Greater Hartford region."

Community education was an early focus for the Bridge – the idea that we could offer a "bridge" between adults and adolescents. "Many people felt that teens were trouble; there were lots of runaways, girls sleeping in doorways" as well as teens hanging out on the Green abusing drugs and alcohol. The Bridge had classes with the police on how to best work with these youth, and also brought in well-known speakers such as child psychologist and parent educator Haim Genott and cultural anthropologist Margaret Mead to increase community understanding of adolescents and their needs.

"Youth Services are Dynamic"

As George put it, "Youth services are dynamic. Agencies have had to serve kids with more problems at younger ages. This year's problems are different from last year's and are multi-faceted: drug use, peer pressure, parental expectations are all affecting kids." With his strong belief in collaboration, George is very pleased by the relationship that has developed between the Bridge and the West Hartford Public Schools. "It took a lot of hard work and good people over the years to build this relationship, which has a very positive effect for kids."

George is also proud of the Family Resource Center, which opened at Charter Oak Academy 20 years ago and works with parents of the youngest children to help them get a good start and build strong connections between families and schools. The FRC and the Bridge's Youth and Family Services department offer many programs, workshops, and support services for parents of children and teens.

A Legacy of Leadership

George has advocated for young people and families in many arenas, including as an attorney. As a partner at Robinson & Cole before his retirement, he secured the firm's support for the Bridge in numerous ways, leading to its receiving the first Bridge Business Award in 2006. George is proud that he could interest some of his colleagues at the firm in supporting the Bridge over the years. In addition to countless hours of pro bono legal work, Diana MacPherson became president of the Bridge Board, and Brian Smith joined the Board last year.

Building for the Future

George is a founding member of the Bridge's Planned Giving Society, Builders for the Future, by naming the Bridge in his will. He expressed it this way: "I have enjoyed knowing and working with all the Bridge's executive directors over the years. They have all strived mightily to achieve our goals and do well for the important youth and family service mission. I have included the Bridge in my will because of my high regard for the Bridge and confidence that this wonderful leadership on behalf of young people and families will continue for years to come."
